"A Gentleman" Breaks Out Again.

To the Editor of the Journal:

I had hoped that, with the triumphant close of the campaign for social order, an ludependent judiclary, honest money and the sacredness of property, the necessity for the activity of my pen would cease. But it is evident that there is to be no rest for same men in this country, cursed as it is with false ideas of government, false sentiments respecting the "rights of man" and other pernicious notions inherited from the detestable dreamers and assassins of the French revolution. Worst of all, we are harassed by a press which fosters these false beliefs in the populace. It is true that, when there seems to be danger of the proletariat acting at the polls under the influence of such delusions, a large portion of the press, as in the recent political struggle, can be counted on to abandon their sans culotte following, yet that is but partial reparation for the mischief which s worked on the common mind by the chronic demagogism of the newspapers. Witness, sir, in proof, the position taken by nearly all our prints, including the Journal, of course, regarding Cuba. 1 confess that, as a rational man, with the sense of responsibility which is impacted by education and the possession of property, it makes my blood boil. Here we have the people of an island owned by Spain in open, armed rebellion against their sovereign, against lawful authority. The Cubans in the field, and those giving aid and comfort to the Cubans in the field, are, under the recognized laws of every civilized nation, guilty of treason, and therefore deserving of death. For those insurrectionists the well-ordered mind should feel only abhorrence—the same kind and degree of abhorrence that would be awakened against the Populists and more violent Bryan-Democrats had they refused to abide by the verdict of the ballot box, and sought by resort to the rifle to wreck the Supreme Court, abolish the process of injunction and impose free silver upon this country. Can any one doubt that, If there were presented to our own Repudiators and Anarchists the slightest prospect of success n rebellion, they would besitate to rise up and give battle to the better classes, to the elements whose conscience is the sole guardian of the national hence in this land of manhood suffrage, so-called? Given such a rebellion, and then fancy all Europe applauding the rebels, and you have a companion picture to the war in Cuba, and the attitude of the United States toward it, as that attitude is represented by our press.

Better, far better, for the civilized minority of Cuba, and consequently for the civilized minority of the United States, that rebellion should be extinguished in fire and blood than that armed revolution so near our doors should triumph and inflame our own discontented and ever-insolent proftariat, nursed, as they have been, on the preposterous and dangerous French ciples" of the Declaration of Independence, written by Thomas Jefferson, disciple of A GENTLEMAN, New York, November 26.
